NO HEARING TO BE GIVEN ON THE COAL COMMISSION BILL*Operators Peeved That They Will Not Be Allowed to Object to Plan.*CALL FOR TRADE SECRETS*Union Coal Men are Not Disposed To Give to the Union or Tight Compromises; New Plan for Getting Pennsylvania Coal to Consumers in N. Y.*By GEORGE H. CUSHING, Special Correspondent of The Courier. WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The war was greased yesterday to put the president's bill authorizing a coal commission through Congress with as least possible delay.

The President sent for Chairman Dawson of the house committee on interstate commerce and gave to him a copy of the bill which he later introduced. The chairman announced, immediately, that he would call a meeting of the committee together that they might favorably upon the bill. Apparently, the coal men are not going to be given a chance to be heard. This is the one possibility now, at the minute, in causing the air to raise on the backs of the coal men's necks. They do not like bills to go through Congress without their being given a chance to be heard, they do not particularly like hearings. They have no large faith in the result of hearings. They have been less faith to believe that what they say will influence the committees very much one way or the other. Still, they do like to be heard. They like to feel that it is realized—if not recognized—that they still own the coal men. They have a foolish notion that they like to be heard before somebody grabs them by the neck and compels them to divulge information which will lay their private affairs before the public.

There is another thing which is stirring some of the coal men. They tolerate non-union mines. The union is tried in every conceivable way to fit their actual cost of production. They know that it, once, the union is figure it will use it forever, they know that this information will furnish new campaign material to the union organizers who invade non-union fields. That is essential. It is only a "may" proposition.

One positive, sure, definite result will be that it will teach the union leaders precisely how much they cut the cost of coal production in the non-union field. It is the latter which the non-union field are the most. Many of these mines are to ship their non-union coal to a union field to get it to market. They have one fair appeal in the ability of their coal. Their real appeal is in their lower cost of production. If the union mines ever know how much it costs the non-union mines to produce coal, this competitive advantage will have been lost. It will mean that the non-union coal will have lost much of its market. So, the non-union mines do not want to give all of their trade secrets to the union or to their competitors. They think that Congress ought to hesitate a long while before demands such a sacrifice of them. They believe that with such a proposal before Congress, the committee in charge of the bill ought to give

PIMPLES ON FACE AND NECK

Itched and Burned. Lasted 5 Years. Cuticura Heals.

"My trouble began from using too strong soap. Large red pimpls broke out on my face and neck and after two or three days would come to a head and break. They itched and burned, and my face was disfigured quite while."

"The trouble lasted about five years. I used to wash with the soap and water as a purifying soap. I continued to use it for about three months after using it for relief. I continued using them and now I am completely healed."

TUESDAY EVENING, AUG. 22, 1922

SIDE-STEPPING IS NOT ADVANCING.

The Congressmen who dwindle around on the issues involved in President Harding's proposals in reference to legislation to meet the situation created by the coal and railroad strikes, and who attempt to sidestep their duty in this connection, are those who will have real fear of the effect on the voters.

The members who, out of an honest conviction that they are doing the right thing, courageously face the issues by taking a firm stand in support of the President in his determination that this shall "be a government of law," will have infinitely better chances of re-election than their weak-kneed and wobbly fellow members who are too timorous that they dare not say their own is their own.

No matter what Congress may do, or what it when acted with a bold attack of "buck fever" may fail to do, there will be condemnation on the part of those who will be discredited in either case. It will be much better for a member to retire to private life with the record of having stood foursquare to all his constituents, than on the right side of issues, than to be re-elected because his only claim to distinction is his ability as a nimble side-stepper.

A man in public life who acquires the reputation of always shaping his speech and action according to the exigencies of politics, rather than by the rule of right, invites little confidence from those to whom he truckles and none at all from those whose ill favor he may gain. Such a member of Congress makes no stirring appeal as a candidate. Voters are becoming increasingly independent of party ties and are making fitness the test in deciding for whom they shall cast their ballot.

President Harding has the great task on his hands at this time of safeguarding the interests of the public, preventing the destruction of trades unionism and protecting every man in his right to work. He is lacking legal authority to do the things necessary in the emergency and has appealed to Congress to take such action as is required. Save for his proposal to multiply governmental commissions his suggestions to Congress should inspire that body to prompt action instead, as seems to have been the result, of creating consternation among the members by placing them in the position of having to deal with or evade issues which are believed will have a disastrous effect upon the political fortunes of many members.

To the extent Congressmen display courage will they find it easier to escape from their present dilemma and more certain to increase the probabilities that will realize their ambitions to become their own successors. Side-stepping is not the direction to take when attempting to achieve a goal.

SOBER SECOND THOUGHT.

The members of the Mount Pleasant fire department acted disreputably when they allowed wiser counsel and their better judgment to prevail in deciding to resume their former relations as protectors of property and human lives in their home town.

The action in declining to further serve in that capacity, because some of their number had been charged with having committed an offense against the law, was both hasty and ill advised and incurred disfavor on part of the public. There are some duties which men assume, or have placed upon them, which they cannot, through pique or similar reason, refuse to discharge. Fire fighting is plainly one of such duties. If otherwise, insurance rates would become excessively burdensome and the menace of possible destructive fires would prevent the growth and progress of our town.

Such precipitated the action of the Mount Pleasant firemen grew out of a desire to stop what many firemen think is condone and which is an infraction of the law. It is also one of the sources of the public's condemnation of the so-called carnival. Gambling by the use of paddle-wheels or like devices is gambling just the same, whether it be conducted as the means of raising money for some worthy purpose or simply to provide gain for the manipulators. These things having featured carnivals there has arisen very strong objections to according them the privilege of exhibiting. In many towns and cities they are now prohibited by ordinance and throughout this and neighboring states a movement is in progress to eliminate them as a form of public entertainment.

In view of the public sentiment on the carnival question, the strike of the Mount Pleasant firemen was a very unfortunate affair. In having withdrawn from the position they had taken the firemen have shown that sober second thought is always better than hasty and ill considered action.

TRUG PERFORMING AT THIRD FOR CUBS IN A SENSATIONAL MANNER

Marty Krug, Cub third baseman, is no longer a youngster. His right leg is not going to be told here, as he wishes the fans to continue thinking. He is a fine fresh from the minors, writes Oscar Relchow in the Chicago News. He has given that impression with the spectacular and smart ball he has been playing and has no desire to make the fans think otherwise. More intelligent baseball has been seen on the Cub field since Krug has been performing at third than the roosters have seen in years. Not only that, but the present third sacker's fielding has been that steady kind that made Charlie Deal a favorite on the North side for many seasons.

Krug did not come to the Cubs as a third sacker. He came from Seattle, Wash., with the expectation of playing second, but was taken off that position when he went into a batting slump. While he was warming the bench Jack Kelleher sustained a badly sprained ankle, and Krug was put at third and has stuck there. He will continue to play there so long as he keeps on performing as brilliantly as he has in the advance the Cubs have made into third place in the National League race.

The Cub third sacker is not a heavy slugger, but always dangerous at the plate because of his ability to hit to all fields. He is also a clever bunter and smart on the bases. He is the kind of athlete who has his plays figured out before they come to him.

SCOTTDALE ALSO READY

MOUNT PLEASANT, Aug. 22.—The Mount Pleasant High School football players are preparing for a busy season this year and with the arrival of H. N. Edmiston, who will have charge of the athletics in that school this year, the football spirit has been awakened. He is already preparing to get in touch with the available material and is desirous of looking over all prospects.

CONNELLSVILLE TEAM WILL PLAY IN FLOOD CITY NEXT SATURDAY

The Connellsville Independents will play away from home Saturday. It will be the first trip the locals have ever made from the home grounds with the exception of games this year at Scottdale and Latrobe. The Independents are going to Johnstown where the team will meet one of the strongest combinations of ball players in this section of the state.

The contest will be played on the Point grounds, familiar to many Connellsville High School grididers who have made the trip to the Flood City for a game. The game will begin at 5 o'clock, daylight saving time, according to the information sent Manager J. T. Thompson.

The trip to Johnstown will be made by automobile. The team and a delegation of fans will depart from here at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning. Those intending to make the trip are urged to get in touch with Mr. Thompson.

The regular Independent line-up will be on the field. The locals are not making any rash predictions about a victory but the players are optimistic over their chances and will expend every effort to come out on top.

Pittsburgh won from Boston yesterday, 5-1 in an easy game. The beam eaters failed to get a man to first base until the ninth inning. Earl Hamilton did the pitching.

Lennox Falls Before Dickerson Run Stars

The Dickerson Run Y. M. C. A. All-Stars defeated the strong Lennox team of Connellsville on the Y. M. C. A. grounds at Dickerson Run Saturday by the score of 6-6.

White for Dickerson Run was effective with more on bases and although the Lennox team bunched hits in two innings, White was never in danger. He also had 13 strike-outs.

The batteries were—Lennox, Moorman and Ridge; Y. M. C. A., White and Sprent and Hoffman.

PENNANTS BOUGHT AND SOLD

When the major leagues a few years ago legislated against the purchase or trade of players after August 1 they took an important step to curtail the iniquitous practice of virtually buying baseball pennants. But the alleged trades that have been made between the New York and Boston American league clubs since the close of last season emphasize the need of still further action if baseball is to retain its high position in the minds of American sport lovers.

Last winter the pennant-winning New York Americans went to Boston and enlisted the services of two of the league's best pitchers in order to assure themselves of a commanding position in the race of 1922. But now that the season is well along and St. Louis is holding in first place the New York management again goes to Boston and secures the league's best third baseman and a star outfielder in exchange for a string of minor leaguers. A glance at the personnel lists of the New York and Boston teams is all that is necessary to establish the fact that Boston is making no serious effort to turn out a winning baseball team and that her American League franchise has no more important purpose to serve than that of affording a training school for New York.

The sport-loving public demands nothing more than fair competitive conditions for all contestants, whether the game be baseball, golf or any other form of sport. It will not long be content to support such a game as baseball, however, if relations like those existing between New York and Boston are permitted to continue.

Judge Landis accepted a position as baseball dictator in order to place the sport on a higher plane and clean out abuses that were threatening it with ruin. If the New York-Boston American League relationship he has an excellent place to begin. Baseball fans are willing to pay their money to see pennants won by hard, open, free competition. They have no interest in seeing them bought and sold.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HORSE HAS EARNED HIS OATS

Old Rosebud, a $700 Yearling, Had Captured Over $100,000 When Finally Retired.

Old Rosebud, the famous race horse, recently destroyed after an injury, was purchased by Ham Applegate and Frank Weltz from J. E. Mudjen as a yearling for $700. He first raced at Juarez, Mexico, where he won in a gallop. He went through his two-year-old period with marked success. In 1914 he was trained for the Kentucky Derby and won the blue ribbon event, running the mile and a quarter in 2:08 2-5, which is the record for the Louisville track and the race.

Old Rosebud had won over $100,000 in stakes and purses. He performed twice at the Juarez meeting, and after finishing second in one event he was unplaced in his other start. Both races were for pinters of the $700 top and bottom variety. It was a pity to see him run. The old gelding did not have foot enough to outrun the champion horses.

Diamond Squibs

The Boston teams are staging a great endurance test in the matter of straight defeats.

Jack Coombs, former big leaguer, has been reengaged as baseball coach at Williams College for next year.

Baltimore is said to have declined an offer of $50,000 for Jack Bentley, pitcher, outfielder and first baseman.

The New Haven club has obtained from Rochester Pitcher Bill Tierney.

GASOLINE

For speed on the open road a gasoline must have quickness. For hard pulls on the hills it must have stamina. For get-away and pick-up in traffic it must have both.

Only a rangy, balanced gasoline can function efficiently and economically under all these conditions.

Atlantic does! It has both volatility and stability. Its low initial "boiling point" means easy vaporization and sure-fire ignition. Its complete chain of higher boiling points assures the full development of tremendous calorific force.

There are no weak spots in the Atlantic "chain" of boiling points. It is uniform. Atlantic all burns. It isn't wasted in misfires or incomplete combustion. It all translates to the utmost power that good gasoline and modern motor construction can produce.

Atlantic Gasoline is made by an organization which follows closely every advancement in automotive engineering and every improvement in refining methods. Atlantic is more than good gasoline—it is RIGHT gasoline!

NEW LIGHT WOOL

Material of Crepe Weave Used for Hand-Made Dresses.

Novelty Is Lighter In Weight Than Many Crepe De Chine and Suitable for Gowns.

The styles brought out at this time of the year in a very large measure predate the fashions of the coming autumn. Women have proved that their tastes in dress are simple, for out of the multitude of ideas constantly launched, and many of them pushed to the utmost, those embodying simplicity invariably take a firm hold. The greatest successes known in the history of dressmaking have been made in recent years by designers who worked along these lines. Those who have eschewed complication and held to an almost stern simplicity have been the ones whose models have had the greatest vitality and endurance.

No stronger current has run through the stream of fashions during the last few years than the Violent genre or type of dress, asserts a writer in the New York Tribune. It never can be said of Violent's models that they definitely date themselves as do most fashions that rage for a time. They are beautiful, artistic and becoming, and no one can deny that they are enduring. Women who have become accustomed to this type of dress continue from season to season to have a similar thing, and often, in ordering a model, have the same style copied two or three times, the only difference being in the color.

In materials, crepe de chine and crepe romaine are still favorites, but they have a novelty in a very light-weight wool material of crepe weave which is now being used for hand-made dresses of the sort that have been so popular in crepe de chine, velveteen and handknit lines. These show drawn work and Venetian ladder embroidery.

It seems a contrariety that dressmakers should manifest so strong an interest in woolen materials at a season of the year when the mercury stands at its highest, but this novel wool is lighter in weight than many crepe de chine and is particularly suitable for dresses being made up at this time. It makes delightful frocks for the mountain or seashore and models made from this fine wool crepe need not be packed away for another season when one comes back to town, but will be found very serviceable throughout the autumn and winter.

LATEST SWEATERS ARE SHEER

Silipover Type Takes Hold on Present Day Demands: Vie With Mohair and Silk

Very sheer sweaters of the silipover type have taken a strong hold on present day demands and vie in favor with mohair and silk combinations of heavier weave. While color contrasts are marked, there are some soft effects such as the blending of Persian colorings. Alternate rows of high color are seen, but this endures mainly on the border.

Silk sweaters are extensively offered in the square block weave, as well as the plain knitted mesh. The textured coat model is offered in all the colorings that blaze forth on the color card as well as pastel tints.

Dresses Accompanied by Hats and Parasols to Match Are the Fashion in Paris

The Prix de Diane which opens the racing season at Chantilly each year holds something of style interest. Printed dresses occasionally accompany hats and parasols to match, lace dresses and capes, the milliner flowers and highly decorative sleeves were the most interesting notes to be made writes a Paris correspondent. One's earlier impression that printed dresses were simply experiencing their annual flurry is changed by the continued increase of those who should know, so that it looks as if it were to be a bigger year than usual in printed silks, particularly crepes in all-over rather modern patterns.

Ask the Clerk—He Knows!

Last winter an association of college professors held a convention at one of the Chicago hotels. In one of their meetings the discussion waxed warm and they finally decided to settle the disputed point by referring to the encyclopedia. Two of them went down to the desk to ask the clerk if a copy of the much needed book was available.

"Now, I inquire if you have an encyclopedia?" said one of the professors looking belligerently over his glasses. "No, I am sorry we do not. But—sufficiently—"that is if you want to know?"—Saturday Evening Post

MARK LOVERS' RESTING PLACE

Pretty Indian Legend Concerning Trees of Somewhat Unusual Growth at Athens, Tennessee

About a century and a quarter ago, not where Athens, Tenn., now stands, lived a Cherokee chieftain and his beautiful Indian daughter, Neelena Kowena. She was betrothed to a young chieftain of her tribe when a white youth came into the village, met her, won her love and succeeded in getting her to break her betrothal to the Indian chieftain and promise to marry her white lover instead. The Ladies' Home Journal. The disappointment filled the heart of the discarded Indian chieftain with a spirit of revenge. Waiting his opportunity he stole upon the two lovers when they were seated on a fallen log in a secluded spot and plunged his knife into the heart of the white man who had robbed him of his sweetheart.

But Neelena Kowena rendered frantic by the death of her lover clutched the knife, turned it into her own breast and fell dying across his feet. Later their bodies were found and buried where they lay. A wreath to the tribal customs in burying the unmarred twin of a forest tree and its fruit was placed on a hand of each.

Today there are two such trees with roots and branches intertwined in a large oak tree, either a buckeye or a tulip tree, with their mingled roots sprouting from the hands of the two twin trees.

VENeer QUICKLY WORE OFF

Habits of Civilization Almost Immediately Forgotten When Indian Children Returned to Tepees.

When General Hancock opened his campaign in the Indian spring of 1867 he was waited on at the outset by some Cheyenne chiefs and, asked to hold a council, "Among other matters brought up for readjustment was one of two Indian children captured to be survivors of the Clivington massacre at Sand Creek, Col. Taken as wards by the government, they were placed in homes and educated. Because of their extreme youth it seemed no easy task to eradicate the "Indian" and bring them up in the white man's road.

One of the two, a boy, was taken east. The other, a girl, was placed with a family near Denver. They were dressed and educated according to civilized standards. Then their people demanded that they be returned. The government had promised by treaty to return such, and the boy and girl, eight or nine years of age, were ordered back to their people.

To all outward appearances, including habits and mannerisms, the two were like any white children. When delivered to their people, they showed no desire to quit the white man's road; besides a year's residence with the Indians the two, lost their veneer, had forgotten, or at least claimed to have forgotten, all knowledge of the English language, and were quick to avoid contact with the whites. The blood of the wild claimed its own.—Adventure Magazine.

BROTHER'S HOME

The fact that his supposedly adored brother was returning home from college that day had been carefully concealed from ten-year-old "Tommy" until he came back from school.

"Tommy," said his mother, "after a younger son had gone upstairs to wash his face and the elder had been concealed in the pantry, "I have a big surprise for you."

"I know what it is," replied Tommy unconcernedly. "Brother's back."

"Why, how did you guess that?"

"Cause my money-box won't rattle any more."

LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

Glimpsing the Future.
The next generation will be that of the peasant village. The son of the farmer will be no longer dazzled and destroyed by the tress of the motor oils. He will travel but only for what he can bring back. Just as his father sends half-way across the continent for good corn or molen-seed, so he will make his village famous by transplanning and grafting this idea or that. He will make it known for its pottery or its processions, its philosophy, or its peacock's. Its music or its swans. . . . There are a thousand miscellaneous achievements within the scope of the great-hearted village. Our agricultural land today holds the playboys who will bring these beauties.—Vachel Lindsay.

Dog Intelligence.

In England a short time ago, says an exchange, a medal was awarded a Great Dane for saving his master's life. A roaring, deafening wind was blowing. The man was walking alone on a dark Cheshire road with his dog.

The dog was some distance behind, but presently he came up at racing speed, took a jump at his master, and sent him sprawling into the hedge. The dog himself could not escape the blow of the car which, but for his intervention, would have killed his master, and was badly injured.

Had to Walk Back.

"You are an hour late this morning," said an employe to his negro servant.

"Yes, sir, I was kicked by a mule on my way, sir."

"That ought not to have detained you an hour, Sam."

"Well, you see, boss, it wouldn't if he'd only kicked me in this direction, but he kicked me the other way."

Gloom.

The camper hid in his tent, was gloomy all day, but the morning dawning up of discontent, "It's raining rain on me."

Parisian Defends American Flapper

THERE is nothing shocking in the attitude or appearance of your "flapper"—"jeunesse" we call them."

So stated no less an authority than Monsieur Fernand Javal, his vindication of the American flapper came upon the eve of his departure for Paris after several observations weeks in New York.

"I watched the sixteen-to-nine-year-old 'flappers' promenading Fifth Avenue," he continued, "and they are visions to gladden the eye, as youthful women have since the world began."

"They affect the most conspicuous modes of the day, the gayest colors and the freest lines—but this is their youth, their inherent energy and joyousness finding expression in exuberant gown and hat."

"Of course, the dressing of their hair follows the newest whim, and every accessory to beauty and charm is experimented with in the adventuring spirit of the young."

None but a crabb'd old peptid would ask the super-charring wench your American produces to do away from any toilet ritual that may maintain their natural attractiveness."

As head of Houbigant, Paris, M. Javal's appreciation shouldadden the heart of every hot-blooded, short-skirted maiden in the land. But the perfumer modified his approval with a note of warning.

"A subtle aura of fragrance surrounds every well-groomed woman," he remarked. "But it must be subtle." A splash from a perfume bottle on the front of her blouse or a heavy application of scented talcum is a desecration. But the subtle aura, ah, that gives her that illusive now-I-watch-it, now-I-don't-care-grace; the fragrance that to the male sense particularly is never disengaged from the personality and charm of the woman herself."

"Of course, the dressing of their hair follows the newest whim, and every accessory to beauty and charm is experimented with in the

RUNNING ANTELOPE'S VIEWS OF HONESTY OF AGENTS

IN THE spring of 1874, while the Seventh cavalry was stationed at Fort Abraham Lincoln, N. D., a band of Hunkpapa Sioux were preparing near by camp to the fact to use General Custer for the food which they much needed. The steamer bringing the supplies issued them by the Indian department had been frozen in ice in the Missouri river, and they had been compelled to eat their dogs and ponies to keep from starving.

Having decided to seek aid from the military, they brought with them their greatest orator, Running Antelope (Tahicasusuk Inyanico), a dusky-looking, dignified old warrior, to present their cause. Running Antelope described at length the distressing condition of the tribe and denounced their agent, accusing all agents of dishonesty.

At this point General Custer interrupted and asked the Interpreter to say to the chief that the Great Father selected only good men for agents before sending them out from Washington. When this was explained to Running Antelope he smiled grimly and, through the interpreter, replied: "Well, they may be good men when they leave the Great Father, but they get to be d—d cheaters by the time they reach us."

After the council was over, General Custer invited Running Antelope and his chiefs into a dining room of his quarters for a feast. Dignified and impressive as the old chief was while speaking in a council, he was not so admirable as a table companion. After gorging himself on everything in sight, he emptied the plates and swept the remains of the feast from the very noses of his headmen, into the folds of his robe. Then he belted it at his waist, making a capacious harness, grunted his appreciation of the hospitality and stalked from the room.

Although Running Antelope had not learned table manners, (according to white men's lights) in the eyes of his fathers, he was a first-class fighting man.

The majority of his victims were members of the Arrikara tribe. His band of Arrikaras for 1850 was ten warriors and three women. His greatest single feat was the slaying of five warriors in one day. In the 12 years which the record covers he confesses, graphically, to dispatching no less than 30 of those hereditary foes of the Sioux, a record of systematic homicide which doubtless gave him an great a reputation among his tribesmen for being a warrior as he enjoyed among the whites as an orator.

The Movie Publicity Man

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS
1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate

Howard Cummings had been separated from his wife, Martha, for over a year when one evening saw her on the screen in a neighborhood movie theater. She looked more beautiful than ever on the screen—she had always been a particularly pretty girl—and seeing her again after so many months, affected Howard deeply.

As Howard gazed at Martha's winsomeness and saw her familiar smile and pleasant characteristics, he felt a sudden rush of his old affection for her. The quarrel which had precipitated their separation seemed small and petty; the time since her departure rolled up dull and lonesome and he was possessed of an intense desire to find Martha and make up at once.

But when Martha had left him a year ago he had said she was leaving him for good. And Martha meant what she said. Was there any possible chance of ever getting her back again?

All the longing for Martha which Howard had suppressed during the year of their separation now swept over him in a tidal wave with his candid acknowledgment that he wanted her back again. Everything else in his life now seemed trivial and unimportant. But behind his longing loomed the great fear that he might not be successful in winning her back. And in addition there was another fear—the fear that he might not be able to find her.

However, Howard was a level-headed, practical, successful business man. Though young in years, he had already rolled up quite a fortune, so he had plenty of money with which to push his quest.

The first step in finding his wife was undoubtedly to ascertain the name of the film in which he had seen her and then try to locate her through the manufacturers.

Howard anticipated trouble in finding his wife. He knew that movie actresses are constantly changing companies, and that movie manufacturers themselves are also constantly coming and going. But, to his delight, his task proved to be surprisingly simple. The company making the film in which he had seen his wife was still operating, and his wife was still employed by the company, according to a telegram he received from the publicity manager of the company in response to his wire.

According to this telegram, the company was operating at Fort Lee, N. J., a short distance from New York City.

Upon receiving this information Howard started at once for New York in the earliest possible train for that city.

The third afternoon found Howard anxiously tolling up the hill at Fort Lee toward a big glass-covered building—the studio where his wife was employed. At the door of the studio a rather shabbily dressed young man was waiting for him.

"You are Mr. Cummings, I presume?" queried this young man.

Howard nodded. "I am the publicity manager for the Shannom company," explained the young man. "Your wife is one of our most promising actresses. She will probably eventually be starred. Come this way, please."

With beating heart Howard followed his guide into the studio and out upon the huge floor, where furniture, lights and odds and ends were thrown about in apparent confusion. At first Howard was confused, ill at ease. He didn't like the odd glances cast at him by all the people who were standing around or rushing back and forth. He wanted only to see his wife.

Suddenly Howard's heart skipped a beat. His wife was coming toward him beautifully dressed in an evening gown. Howard looked at her hungrily. Never had she seemed prettier to him. In that moment their eyes met. He was surprised, then an incurable look appeared in his wife's eyes before she averted them for a minute or two. Then she came to him and held out her hand cordially.

"How are you, Howard?" she said.

"I—I—" stammered Howard.

On the instant he stopped. A great burst of light blinded him for a moment. "He heard some one—it sounded like the publicity manager—saying: 'That was a hasty dash,' and then his eyes focused again on his wife to find her looking inscrutable and distant.

"I want to talk to you, Martha," said Howard. "Can't we go somewhere and talk?"

"Not now, Howard," said Martha rather coldly. "I'm due to rehearse some scenes now. But come back tomorrow. Perhaps we can talk tomorrow."

A feeling of resentment swept over Howard.

"I'm at the Consul hotel," he said briefly. "Sipposer you phone me there tomorrow when you're not busy."

Without another word Howard turned and hurried from the studio.

Rage and resentment swept over him. What a reception! What treatment when he had come such a distance for the purpose of trying to make up with his wife! He had half a mind to call the whole thing off and go back to his home without making any further attempt at a reconciliation.

Then again the thought of the loneliness of the past year, of his really great love for the wife who had never seemed prettier than now swept over him. He threw back his shoulders.

"Of course she couldn't be anything but distant and cold with all those people around her," he told himself. "It will be different tomorrow—I'm sure it will."

It was different on the following day, but not in the manner Howard thought.

At breakfast the next morning as Howard was casually glancing through his paper, his eyes suddenly focused in horror at a picture on the masthead page. The picture was a photo taken in a studio. It showed a man elegantly dressed, hands with a brilliantly-dressed, beautiful actress. The woman's face was cold and distant. Over the picture was this caption: "Prominent Midwestern Business Man Seeks Reconciliation With Wife Who Is Pecoming famous in the movies." The woman was his wife, the man was himself. Now he knew the meaning of that photographic flash while he was at the studio.

Howard went fighting mad at seeing this picture and rending the accompanying paragraphs giving intimate details of his life.

"Of course, Martha, was in on it," he told himself. "She's crazy for publicity. No doubt she put up that publicity manager to put the other across. It's a rotten thing to do and I'm done with her forever!"

Howard packed his grip at once, determined to return to his home forthwith. But to his disgust there was no train until late in the afternoon and this made it necessary for him to put in the day in New York.

Howard tramped back and forth on Fifth Avenue and Broadway trying to find interest in the glowing show windows and the never-ending crowds. But he couldn't get his mind off the dismal end of his expedition.

At last Howard turned his steps toward the hotel, as it was nearing train time. Not once did he think of going back to the studio or even of calling up his wife.

Howard's heart was exceedingly heavy as he opened the door to his room. Then, as he stepped into the room, he gave a startled glance toward the window. There, seated in an armchair, was his wife.

"How did you get in here?" Why did they let you in?" demanded Howard.

"I—I—" stammered Howard. "On the instant he stopped. A great burst of light blinded him for a moment. "He heard some one—it sounded like the publicity manager—saying: 'That was a hasty dash,' and then his eyes focused again on his wife to find her looking inscrutable and distant.

THE INS AND OUTS OF IT

Small Rebecca was proud of her father's rank as a first lieutenant, and grew quite indignant when a neighbor boy called him "Captain."

Howard stepped in the room and closed the door I behind him.

"Well," persisted Rebecca, still determined to maintain her father's dignity at all costs, "he's not much of an officer, anyway."

EFFECTS OF STRIKE SETTLEMENT ON COAL NOT YET NOTICEABLE

Total Last Week Not Likely to Go Above 4,576,000 Net Tons.

Movement in Some Non-Union Fields: Gains Due to Clearing up of Transportation Difficulties Elsewhere: Coke Production Continues to Gain

Special to The Courier.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The United States Geological Survey says that it is too early to know the immediate effect upon local production of the agreement signed at Cleveland between mine workers and bituminous operators. The production during the past week, August 14-19, from the mines which were working will be about 4,500,000 tons. It is unlikely that the union mines now reopening in Ohio and elsewhere will raise the total output for the week which above the 4,576,000 tons produced last week. For while mines long closed by the strike are reopening there has been a recurrence of acute railroad disability in certain of the non-union and open shop fields. Loadings on Monday, August 14 according to the railroads were 15,724 cars, a decrease of three per cent as compared with the week preceding. Thereafter they declined steadily to 12,839 cars on Wednesday. The loadings on Thursday, 13,463 cars, gave the first indication of shipments from mines reopened under the Cleveland agreement.

The mine reports confirm previous statements that the increase in production in the week ending August 5 was due largely to improvement in transportation. All districts of the Middle Appalachian field where traffic congestion has been worst reported a better car supply, and losses through transportation difficulties decreased.

The mine operators' statements show conclusively that the gradual increase in production has not been due to the opening of mines in the strongly unionized districts, but rather to improved car and labor supply in the non-union and partly organized fields.

Final returns show production of all coal in the nineteenth week of the strike as 4,505,000 tons including 29,000 tons of anthracite. In the corresponding week of 1921 the output of bituminous was 7,770,000 tons and of anthracite 1,770,000 tons, a total for all coal raised of 9,540,000 tons; the laborer that the total was 12,280,000 tons. Considering anthracite and bituminous coal as a common source of supply, the present weekly output is five or six million tons below normal.

The production of beehive coke appears to have found a temporary level around 110,000 tons per week. Using reports of cars loaded by the principal coke carriers as a basis, the total output in the week ending August 12 was estimated at 115,000 net tons.

Production in the Connellsville Region continued to increase slowly, and according to The Courier, the output was 25,830 tons against 25,730 in the week preceding. The Courier states that one additional plant resumed operations, and that the number of ovens now in blast is 7,306 against 7,384 in the week ending April 8.

"BLIND HEARTS."—The feature picture today at this theatre, presents Hobart Bosworth, well known screen actor, in a splendid role. A cast of prominent screen players, widely known individually and perfectly adapted to the characterizations they carry support Hobart Bosworth in "Blind Hearts," his first independent starring vehicle. Bosworth, indeed, portrays the absorbing and powerful role of Lars Larson, a descendant of hardy Scandinavian stock who wins a fortune in the Yukon gold fields and with it loses the friendship of his lifelong companion, John Thomas. It is this barrier that separates the two for more than 20 years and its final bridging that constitutes the pivotal plot of the drama. John Thomas is enacted by Wade Boteler, featured player of many successful productions but perhaps most popular through his characterization of the "mess sergeant" in the screen version of Mary Roberts Rinehart's famous "Twenty-Three and a Half Hours Later." Madge Bellamy, former New York stage favorite recently recruited to the screen, appears showing off brilliant costumes and jewels as Julia Larson. Wednesday and among the distinguished "extras" in "Thursday Pictures of the Night" will be shown.
